

Four-Channel Social Content Calendar

State-sponsored 529 college savings plan · January 2021 · LinkedIn, Facebook, X/Twitter, Instagram

Written by Monica Vendituoli for a Communications Strategy Group client

Client anonymized. A real calendar I wrote and managed. The plan's name, its partners, and its URLs have been replaced with generic placeholders. Copy, channel differentiation, and campaign structure are unchanged.

The problem this calendar solves

A 529 plan has one message, start saving early, and four audiences who need to hear it differently. Parents of toddlers are on Facebook, parents of high school seniors respond to urgency, employers are on LinkedIn, and Instagram wants a story arc, not a paragraph. Every theme below is written four times rather than copy-pasted, and the calendar carries a separate Story Copy + CTA column so the Instagram version is designed as frames from the start.

Columns the working file carried

- Background, the reasoning behind each post, so a reviewer never had to ask why it existed.
- Post copy, written per channel, not adapted after the fact.
- Link, the exact destination URL for tracking.
- Graphic copy, the text the design team needed to place on the asset.
- Story copy + CTA, frame-by-frame direction for Instagram Stories.
- Feedback column, reviewers initialed edits in-line, which kept revision history in one file.
